

Website Privacy Policy

This policy covers this website only. The server and the apps have their own privacy documents — see the legal home — and they are even shorter, because those collect nothing at all.

The whole policy, in three sentences

This site runs zero trackers and zero analytics, sets only the cookies it technically cannot work without, and makes no requests to third-party services from your browser. The only personal data it can ever hold is an email address you volunteer to the SCNet waitlist. We do not sell, share, rent or enrich anything, because there is nothing to sell, share, rent or enrich.

1. Data we collect automatically: none

- No analytics. No Google Analytics, no Plausible, no self-hosted analytics, nothing. We do not count you, fingerprint you, or measure you.
- No trackers, no ads, no pixels, no beacons.
- No third-party requests. Fonts, styles, scripts and images are all served from this domain. Your browser talks to us and only to us.
- Server logs. Like any web server, ours writes technical logs (requested URL, timestamp, IP address) for security and debugging. They are used for nothing else, correlated with nothing, and routinely deleted. They never leave our infrastructure.

2. Data you can volunteer: one email address

If you join the SCNet waitlist, we store:

What	Why	How long
The email address you typed	To email you when SCNet opens — that is the only use	Until SCNet launches and the list has served its purpose, or until you ask us to delete it, whichever comes first

No name, no IP attached to the signup, no marketing list, no "partners". To have it removed, open an issue on GitHub or use the footer contact — deletion is honored without questions.

3. Cookies

Only strictly necessary, first-party cookies — listed individually in the Cookie Policy. There are no tracking cookies, which is why the site shows no cookie banner: there is nothing to consent to.

4. Where data lives

The waitlist database lives on the server that runs this website, controlled by Tripsittr LLC. It is not synced to third-party marketing tools, CRMs or data warehouses.

5. Your rights

Access, correction, deletion, portability, objection — ask and it happens. Since the most we can hold about you is one email address, every request reduces to "tell us the address and what you want done with it".

6. Children

The site collects no data from anyone, children included. The waitlist is intended for people old enough to enter a subscription when SCNet opens.

7. Changes

Changes move the effective date at the top, with history visible in the site's public repository. We will not weaken the zero-tracking commitment quietly: any change to sections 1–3 would be announced on the site itself.
